My wife and I are eighty. Last summer we had installed solar panels on our home for mainly altruistic reasons, namely, to be kind to Mother Earth and reduce our carbon footprint. It is not a given that we will live long enough to recover our initial investment of the installation through reduction of our monthly electric bills.

And now what does Rocky Mountain propose to do? Slap all of us in the face who want to become independent of dirty fuels in favor of renewable energy sources.
